FLORIDA PINEAPPLE GROVE.

Woman Meeting with Great Success in Raising Fruit.

From a hard-working life behind the footlights to a calm and peaceful existence among the pines of sunny Florida is as great a change as could well be imagined, but this is what has just happened to Miss Jessie Mae Hall of New York, who for a mere song became the owner of a pine-apple grove of 244 acres in southern Florida.

There is no more profitable investment than a pinapple farm in good condition, according to the New York Tribune, one acre of such land in cultivation being equal in value to 160 acres of grain, and Miss Hall's farm has fifteen acres of pines, with five of bananas and 204 uncultivated acres. There is also no easier or more pleasant work, particularly for a woman, than pine farming. All she has to do is to order her slips, select her land, hire her help and superintend the planting. Then she can rest for a year or two, leaving nature to do its work. In twenty-four months or less the fruit will be ready for the market. It is not all play, but there is seldom any worry as to the successful marketing of the crop; for the pineapple coming, as it does, when strawberries are pretty well over and the peach crop not yet at its height, is always heartily welcomed.

The expense of putting the land under cultivation is comparatively small, amounting to about $800 for the first year, while each succeeding year brings the cost down. If no help has to be hired the expense can be reduced to about $50 an acre, with an expenditure of about $20 more before the first crop is produced. The returns in the case of Miss Hall's farm last year were $1,000 an acre.

The cultivation of the land after the crop has been set out is a matter which requires almost no attention. The only danger is from the droughts to which the pineapple district of Florida is liable and which occur between the time of blooming and the time of ripening. Sometimes these droughts are of a month's or six weeks' duration, with a total rainfall of an inch, and the effects are serious. The pineapple leaf, however, makes it resistant to drought, unless it is broken, which happens very early and causes the plant to lose its moisture. Special care must be taken, therefore, in all operations in the groves not to break the leaves.

The harvesting of the pines requires skill and care. In the first place, the gatherers must know just when to pick the fruit. The crates going by freight by summer must be filled with fruit that is just turning. Those going earlier in the season, or to a shorter distance, may hold fruit quite well colored. The gatherers wear leggings which reach to the knees and canvas mittens. They stand in rows, and as they break off the fruit by a dexterous twist they toss it to the "second helpers, who stand in the pathway between the rows of pines. These "seconds," as they are called, stack the fruit up carefully in pyramid rows, after which it is gathered and put in field crates and baskets, to be taken to the packing sheds. Here long tables cover the four sides of the room, and the workers sort and wrap the pines according to size and grade. There is no way of measuring the fruit; it has to be done by guess, but in a few weeks a man becomes so skilled in selecting pines of uniform size that the packers have no trouble in filling the crates.

It is in the groves that most care must be taken, for a fine specimen can be ruined by being carelessly broken. The gatherers are the most skilled of the laborers on a pineapple plantation and they receive the largest salaries.

The Judge Who "Cared."

By the retirement of Justice Mayer, who the other day presided for the last time at the children's court, the city loses a useful public servant. Fitting testimony to this loss was rendered in court by the representatives of charitable societies. But the best word was spoken by Meyer Cohen, a "probation boy," when he said, a little hoarsely: "I was one of the first boys to come under you. You've been the best friend I ever had. You seemed to care whether I was square or not, an' I wish that you wasn't going away from here."

Perhaps Justice Mayer was a trifle hoarse also—the weather has been so treacherous—when he replied that he should always take an interest in his young friend, and that "there are lots of you here in New York who don't have half a chance."

It is because "half a chance" is more than some poor boys get, and because if they were put with hardened criminals for slight offenses they might thereafter have no chance at all, that the children's court was opened. May it always have a man on the bench who "cares."—New York World.

RAM'S HORN BLASTS.

Warning Notes Calling the Wicked to Repentance.

WHEN a man gets to the top everybody is willing to give him a boost.

Luring men to church on false pretenses is not likely to lead them to Christ.

Grace is a perennial, not an annual coming up at revival times each year.

A man does not have to give away his brains in order to get religion.

Where the butter is thickest on the devil's bread the poison is deadliest.

Live up to Bible duties and Bible difficulties will light up of themselves.

To bury yourself in your sorrow is as sinful as any other form of suicide.

How can you be happy in Heaven when you are miserable in God's house here?

God promises strength for the cares of the day, but not for those of the week.

Some people are laying up for a nickel-plated Heaven, judged by their offerings.

The perfection of God's work does not depend wholly on the polish of the instrument.

It is usually the other man's gnat at which we strain and our own camel we swallow.

Our credit in Heaven is not determined by what we give, but by what we have left.

The man with an empty mind will always put all his furniture in the windows of his life.

When the grateful heart is silent it falls out of tune quicker than when it is singing all the time.

"A wide-open town" is simply the modern world's rendering of Christ's phrase, "the broad gate."

Christianity is an argument for the miraculous instead of the miraculous being an argument for Christianity.

The promises of Providence are to those who dig for their bread and not to those who dream about big loaves.

It is strange that all rejoice when we begin the sorrows of earth and weep when we begin the joys of Heaven.

A ZOO KIDNAPING.

The Middle-aged Baby Leopard Dies to Grief.

A kidnaping that for a while boded ill for the kidnaped took place at the Cincinnati zoo a short time ago.

A six-months-old leopard has been given the freedom of the carnivora floor during the last few weeks and until recently wandered unmolested from one end of the building to the other exchanging felicitations with the animals confined in the building during his march up and down the floor.

Under one of the cages a kennel has been provided for a fox terrier and her litter of pups. Apparently the baby leopard looked upon this arrangement with a great deal of dissatisfaction, which is assertively expressed.

While the fox terrier was asleep the young leopard stole slyly up to the kennel deftly removing one of the little terriers, and with the dog between his teeth ran swiftly to the other end of the building. A moment later the mother terrier discovered her loss and went on the scent of the thief, whom she discovered just as he was depositing the pup in a far off corner of the carnivora.

What happened then could only be surmised by a series of nerve-rasping yelps and roars that sent the zoo attendants to the carnivora building. When they arrived all the animals confined in that building had been aroused, but above the hoarse noises coming from the throats of the lions and tigers could be heard the sharp yelps and shrill squealing of the dog and baby leopard, who were engaged in mortal combat for the possession of the little terrier. When they were finally separated the terrier had considerably the better of the argument.

CHEMISTRY OF THE HAIR.

Color Has Much to Do with Its Mineral Compounds.

There are many ways of classifying the hair and anthropologists consider it from many different standpoints, says an exchange. The chemist now has his word to say on the question, and M. J. Gaube has just furnished us with the following interesting information with reference to the appendices of the skin. Blonde hair is characterized by a high proportion of soda and also of silica; red hair contains a very high proportion of silica; black is poor in soda and poor in silica, the latter being almost entirely lacking, but on the other hand is rich in potassium. Thus we have potassic hair, silicic hair and sodic hair, and as the hair is continually growing and being cut or falling out it is evident that by means of the hair there is both constant and important elimination of certain mineral compounds.

Let us admit with M. Gaube that there are in France 14,000,000 women each of them possessing a head of hair weighing 300 grams, a total of 4,200,000 kilograms. This hair contains more than 118,000 pounds of mineral matter. In iron alone the hair of the French could produce 4,800 pounds, and in sulphur 9,000 pounds. Each woman loses on the average 10 centigrades of hair a day; that is, 2,800 pounds in twenty-four hours for the total female population of the country, or 1,022,000 pounds a year.

Taken from Nature.

From the pure fountain of nature flows the stream of energy and health, which renews and invigorates our race. In every period of the world's progress men have received their greatest strength and inspiration direct from nature. It is the greatest teacher and developer of mankind. Not only do we get inspiration from nature, but health as well. To live in the open, in the sunshine, in the fields or woods, drinking pure air into the lungs, is best for those who have the opportunity. For people who are run-down, nervous, suffering from occasional indigestion or dyspepsia, headaches, night-sweats, whose machinery has become worn, it becomes necessary to turn to some tonic or strengthener which will help them to get on their feet and put the body into its proper condition. For centuries it has been known that nature's most valuable health-giving agents are roots, herbs, barks and berries, and some forty years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., found a combination of roots, herbs and barks, taken from the fields and woods and made into an alterative extract, produced results in the system which was satisfactory in almost every case of blood disorder and stomach trouble. This concentrated extract of nature's vitality purifies the blood by putting the stomach into healthy condition, helping the assimilation of food which feeds the blood, and putting the liver into activity. Nervousness and sleeplessness are usually due to the fact that the nerves are not fed on properly nourished blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes pure, rich blood, and thereby all the organs of the body are run smoothly, like the machinery which runs in oil. In this way you feel clean, strong and strenuous—you feel braced up, and you are good for a whole lot of physical or mental work. Best of all, the strength and increase in vitality and health are lasting. The trouble with most tonics and medicines which have a large sale for a short time is that they are largely composed of alcohol holding the drugs in solution. This alcohol fairly shrinks up the red blood corpuscles, and so one may feel exhilarated and better for the time being, yet in the end weakened and with vitality decreased. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does not contain alcohol. The proof is easy. Distill a little in a glass retort and see for yourself. Every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery bears the stamp of public approval. For the druggist to offer you something he claims is "just as good" is to insult your intelligence. What you want is a remedy without alcohol, and one which has stood the test of time.

"It is with pleasure that I give my hearty endorsement to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Hon. E. E. Willard, Judge of 11th District, Duval Co., Florida. "It is the most successful remedy that I know of for the weakened condition of the digestive organs which excessive heat or overwork sometimes brings, causing indigestion, sick headache, a disagreeable or bitter taste in the mouth, sleepless nights and a complication of unnatural conditions, making one feel sick all over. Your remedy is scientifically prepared and well calculated to renovate the entire system, cleansing and vitalizing the blood and assisting the stomach to perfect assimilation of food, which will soon restore health and harmony."

The dealer who tries to palm off a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," does so in order to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious preparations. Insist on having Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

The best guide to health and happiness is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. In the scope of its 1008 large pages there are discussed the great mysteries of human origin and of human destiny, and a broad path is laid out for those who would have a strong and long life. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book bound in strong cloth, or if content to have the book in paper covers, send only 21 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

POPULAR RAILROAD MAN IS NO MORE.

ASSISTANT GENERAL PASSENGER AGENT W. McMULLIN PASSES AWAY.

The news of the death of William J. McMullin, assistant general passenger agent of the California Northwestern Railway, which occurred Monday morning at his residence in San Rafael, was received with genuine regret all along the line of the California Northwestern.

There were few men in the railroad business better liked than Mr. McMullin and his death will be mourned by a host of friends. He was ever courteous to all those who were associated with him and he was a great favorite with the public as he was with the men with whom he worked He has been many years with the California Northwestern.

He was married and leaves two children. He had been ailing for some time and was unconscious for some hours before his death. The late Station Agent Joe McMullin of Santa Rosa was a brother of the deceased. Another brother is George McMullin the train dispatcher at Tiburon.

Mrs. Pauline McMullin of this place is a sister-in-law of deceased and received a telegram announcing his death Monday morning.

She attended the funeral in San Rafael Wednesday.

Plaintiff Wins Case.

The action brought by Mrs. Sarah M. Weaver, against her brothers, as the administrators of the estate of the late A. H. Sutherland of Bennett Valley regarding the possession of some forty acres of land which she alleged he deeded to her some years ago and consequently was her own property and not to be included in the other property of the estate, has been settled out of court. It was to have been tried on Wednesday in Judge Burnetts court but it was announced then that a compromise had been effected. It is understood that by the terms of the agreement reached Mrs. Weaver holds the land and R. G. Sutherland receives a certain monetary consideration and pays the cost and claims against the Sutherland estate. It seemed at one time as if the suit would result in a bitter contest. William F. Cowan represented Mrs. Weaver, and Messrs. Butts & Weske appeared for the defendants.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications as they cannot reach the deceased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is closed entirely deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrah, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh cure. Send for circulars free.

A PROBLEM IN SAVING.

Suppose a man who has accumulated three hundred dollars in savings by putting away one dollar each day begins to draw out two dollars at night for each dollar he puts in the bank in the morning, how long will it take until his money is entirely gone? That's a problem of figures. Here's a problem of fact. If a man uses up in a day twice the strength which food supplies his body how long before he becomes bankrupt in health? That problem can't be figured exactly, but the result is absolutely sure—physical bankruptcy.

When the normal supply of food eaten does not keep up the normal strength there must be a loss, from some cause, of the nutrition contained in the food eaten. The common cause of this loss and its resulting weakness is disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and digestive and nutritive tract. It restores strength by enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, which is the only source from which strength can be supplied to the body.

"I cannot express my gratification in words. I had been suffering from indigestion so badly that I could not work more than half the time," writes Mr. Victor L. Hayden, of Blackstone, Nottoway Co., Va. "Now can work every day and eat anything I want. Why? Because I took Dr. R. V. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It has put new life and energy in me, restored my health and made a man of me once more. I used to weigh 170 but had gotten down to 144, now am back to 160 and will soon be back to my old weight if nothing happens. Your medicine has done it all. I cannot thank you enough for your advice."

AMBITION.

Some luxuries this life affords
  Which few can understand;
His gold one person fiercely hoards,
  Another seeks command.
But he who most, since earth began,
  Has been beneath the sway
Of one idea, is the man
  Who wants to have his say.

He gives small thought to raiment fine,
  Nor asks where he shall sleep,
For Providence, he doth opine,
  A special watch should keep
O'er him. He hurries forth to speak,
  Or writes both night and day,
No other pleasure does he seek—
  He wants to have his say.

Perchance the hearth is dark and chill,
  Perchance his coat is thin;
Perchance the larder fares but ill,
  And coal forsakes the bin—
He still will scorn the marts where gain
  Directs the toiler's way,
He smiles at hunger and at pain,
  For he has had his say.

And if mankind should hear his word,
  With feeling so intense,
That earth to tumult would be stirred,
  And deeds of violence.
He'll sit upon some burnt out pyre
  And sigh without dismay—
"It isn't quite what I desire,
  But I have had my say!"

My First Client

I WAS sitting in my new office one afternoon several weeks ago, smoking and feasting my eyes on those inverted letters on the glass panel of my door and incidentally listening to the steps along the corridor and watching the shadows that passed and repassed, when one of the shadows startled me by pausing there. There was a knock and I called, "Come in,' feeling instinctively that my career had begun. I believe I stared a full minute at my visitor before I realized who he was. Then I sprang up and grasped his hand.

"Rogers!" I exclaimed. "You out here?"

"Welcome to the West, Hunter," he answered, laughing and shaking my hand heartily. "Yes, I've been here two years."

"So you're going to take in the woolly West," he observed when we were seated, adding, with a glance around, "you are pretty well fixed. May I ask how goes the battle?"

Then we compared notes. I found that he had lately become junior member of a law firm in Guthrie, of whose prosperity I already knew. While in Oklahoma City on business he had heard of my presence and so looked me up. I gave him all the college news, not forgetting the great event of commencement week—my marriage. He seemed much interested and asked a lot of questions, among them whether I remembered a Miss Hollings—Catherine Hollings. Of course I remembered Bob Hollings' pretty sister, and instantly certain rumors heard months ago came forcefully to my mind. No, Miss Hollings hadn't married; hadn't cared a pin for that rich Davis fellow. Oh, yes; she was just as pretty and popular as ever, only didn't seem to prefer one man to another.

That, then, was what took Rogers away from college, with his law course only half completed. I had often wondered at it, remembering his excellent standing in the classes and his popularity with the men. The poor fellow fidgeted under the fire of cross-questions that I now aimed at him, but at length he capitulated manfully and gave me the whole story. I felt like a detective working up a clue.

"It was no use, I saw," he ended, "so I came away. I couldn't endure being there and having to see her every few days."

"And you never proposed to her?"

"No; I had a little pride. I was not going to ask what I know would be refused."

That sounded final, so we let the subject drop. I might have added that I actually did propose to her a couple of years ago. Did he know of that affair, I wondered.

Half an hour later we walked together to my home, where I introduced him to Dolly, and we spent a very pleasant evening. "Isn't he nice?" she said to me after he had gone. "Rogers, Rogers," reminiscently. "I believe I've heard of him before."

Next day Rogers returned to Guthrie early and I did not see him. Business at my office was still quiet, so I did a lot of thinking, and finally wrote some letters. One went to the old college town. I felt a few qualms about sending it, but was glad on the whole when the missive was in the mail and therefore beyond my recall. Certain words kept-me were haunting my mind. "Isn't it anything to you how these poor fellows feel? One might think you hadn't a heart at all!" And her answer:

"Oh, but I have! I have indeed; because it answers when I call, but it has gone a long journey—to Japan maybe or to—say, Oklahoma."

That answer had seemed to me unwarrantably flippant, but somehow the words were taking on a new meaning. How forlorn and pretty she had looked that evening, two years ago! It was brutal in me to talk to her as I did.

About two weeks later, on returning from the office, Dolly met me at the door with the mystifying announcement: "Bess is coming on Saturday!"

"Bess!" I said. "Who's Bess "

"Bess Hollings, of course. The second cousin I've told you so much about. And, David, think of it! Think of it!"

"Think of what?"

"Why, David, to think that she is coming here! And he here, too! Ever since we came West I've been planning for her to visit us, and kept it for a surprise to you. But I never dreamed, when I wrote to her, that he was here."

"Do explain."

"No."

"Don't you know?"

"Then I sha'n't tell."

I did not reply, for something was happening in my masculine mind. Bess that meant Elizabeth—Catherine Elizabeth Hollings. And I hadn't known till now that she was Dolly's cousin!

On the following Wednesday morning I was at my desk writing. Dolly, close by, was clicking off some letters—she comes down nearly every day to help me, says she loves to, dear little woman! Rogers, in the city again on business, had just dropped in and was standing at a little distance, looking out of the window. I was thinking of Saturday and its possibilities.

There was a light step in the corridor, then the door, which stood ajar, was pushed farther open and there on the threshold stood—Miss Hollings. Dolly and I rose together. I thought Dolly was going to introduce me to "Cousin Bess," but she seemed to see that it was unnecessary.

"I had no idea of coming so ahead of time until it was too late to telegraph," Miss Hollings began gayly. "I meant to stop in St. Louis, but Bob simply made me come right through. He and Alice will be here in a week—their wedding was on the tenth—and I am to find them a house. Bob can't get along without 'Sister Cath,' you see, if he is married."

Her voice and manner were as I remembered, but she was more beautiful than ever. I did not wonder that Rogers—I glanced over at him. He was standing, as he had turned at her entrance, with a queer sort of expression, his face very white. Till then she had not seen him, but her eyes must have followed mine, for she grew pale and recoiled a step, as if some one had pushed her. Then she started across to him, holding out her hand. He met her halfway, with a low cry of "Catherine!" And I heard her murmur "Dick!"

An hour or so later, as she and Dolly were about to leave the office, Catherine turned to me. "Bob is quite enthusiastic about becoming your partner," she said. "It was so nice of you to think of it. He says he will deed me part of that land you have been buying for him if I will stay West. Is that the property you wrote me about? You thought I had some claim to it, remember."

"Er—no," I stammered. "We hadn't begun that deal then. The property I spoke of was—er—well, Rogers, here."

There were four scarlet faces in the room. Dolly and I looked at each other. I felt like a culprit; probably I looked like one; Dolly looked several things. Meanwhile Catherine and Rogers had apparently managed to understand each other, for Rogers came up and gripped my hand. "You're all right, old man," he exclaimed joyously. "You've the making of a fine lawyer in you.'—Indianapolis Sun.

INDIANS VENERATE THE DEAD.

Totem Poles that Tell the History of a Chieftain.

"One of the distinctive features appealing to every traveler in Alaska," said F. J. Parke, special agent of the interior department, in the Milwaukee Sentinel, "is the veneration displayed by the Indians for their dead. The most picturesque spots imaginable are selected for their burial places and as one travels along the mountain sides or up the canyons and valleys the fantastic graven representation of animals, birds or fish indicate the fact that beauty spots have been taken for the burial places of the natives. I visited villages where the totem poles recounting the history of its population resembled a small shipyard. The amount of work done on these records is almost beyond comprehension and, like the Egyptian hieroglyphics in ancient times, graven upon marble and stone, the language of a totem pole tells the history of chieftains and tribesmen.

Some of these features must disappear with the march of commercialism developing the territory. The relic hunter, imbued with the spirit of vandalism, is no respecter of traditions, and many a rudely carved cedar pole has been transplanted. In stead of standing like grim sentinels guarding the secrets of the frozen northland and to the initiated telling the story of the life and death of the semibarbarian whose deeds it commemorates, the chances are that it will decorate the private grounds of relic-hunting tourists."

To Keep Pastry.

Instead of putting away pastry, such as cheese cakes, jam, tarts, etc., held in reserve in a large tin and fetching out when wanted, it will be found more convenient to pack about the number likely to be needed at one time in two-pound biscuit tins. Line the tin with butter paper, covering the pies carefully over and closing tightly, thus avoiding admitting air more than is necessary and also preventing breaking the edges and spoiling the appearance.

Civilization is making such rapid strides that some day we will hear of a missionary getting cooked in a chafing dish.

"FARES, PLEASE."

Both Young Ladies Wanted to Pay, But Kept the Conductor Waiting.

Car-conductors familiar with the various peculiarities of travelers, will agree that the following scene, described in the Pittsburg Gazette, might occur in any street-car in any city. The dramatis personae are two well-dressed young women and the conductor. The time is the present.

Conductor—Fare, please.

First young lady (hastily)—Let me pay it, dear.

Second young lady (opening chatelaine and beginning to take out handkerchief, small package, gloves and keys)—Not for worlds, dearest! I have some change.

First young lady (excavating the depths of wrist-bag)—Nonsense, I have it right here. And you paid it last, you know.

Second young lady—I'm sure I did'nt. It was you, don't you remember? The reason I know is because we were going to Lottie's tea.

First young lady—Oh, yes, and I wore my crepe de chine. But that wasn't the last time we went out together. We were going to the matinee, and I'm sure you paid the fare.

Second young lady (triumphantly taking out a purse—Well, it doesn't make any difference. I'll just pay it again.

Conductor (wearily)—Fare, ladies.

First young lady (indignantly, also producing purse)—It does make a difference too! Do you think I am going out and have you pay my fare everywhere we go? Here, I have it.

Second young lady—Don't be so silly. Here, I have it.

First young lady—My dear, I insist.

Second young lady—Agnes, I shall be downright offended with you in a moment. I shall pay the fare.

Conductor—I don't care who pays it, but I don't want to stand here all day.

First young lady (with dignity)—You are a rude person and I shall report you. My uncle is one of the principal stockholders, and I shall report your behavior to him. Here, take this money. I'm sure you only had to wait a second or two.

Second young lady—Isn't it awful, the insolence of these people?

Hat Adorns Coffin.

There is one woman in Chicago, the wife of a young minister, by the way, who has always had a liking for hats of the flowerbed variety. At present she owns a "dream" of a "sky piece" that is covered with violets. The pretty young wife wore this hat to a funeral recently, at which her husband officiated. Going into the room which contained the coffin, she removed the hat and placed it on a stand The sad-faced, sleek-haired undertaker came in a few minutes later to arrange the "floral tokens" on the coffin. After placing the boquets, wreaths, pillows, broken wheels, anchors and the usual run of flowers in the place, he picked up the violet-covered hat and tenderly placed it on top of all the rest. Several of the "mourners" giggled, and the minister's wife wanted to grab her hat and run. She had to let it alone, however, until the close of the ceremony. When she marched past the bier she lunged for the hat and successfully made her escape.

F. H. B.

A guest visiting a family containing a number of children was frequently puzzled at meal-time by hearing one or another member of the household murmur in a warning tone, "F. H. B." Finally his curiosity became so acute that he asked his host what the saying meant.

"It means," replied the head of the household, smilingly, "that it isn't safe to ask for a second helping, or to accept it if one be offered—that there isn't any more of that particular dish in the kitchen."

"I see," returned the partially enlightened guest. "But what is the exact significance of those three letters?"

"They stand," said the host, "for 'Family, Hold Back.'"—Woman's Home Companion.

Positive Indications.

Mabel—Did Gladys have a fashionable wedding?

Maude—Very. Why, her wedding dress was nearly torn off before she got inside the church.—Judge.

Lake in Newfoundland.

Nearly one-third of the surface of Newfoundland is covered with fresh water, mostly in the form of lakes.

When the two engaged in a friendship are kept hard at work, it may last ten years, but if they are idle the friendship will not survive the tenth week.

ONE OF AFRICA'S WONDERS.

City of a Hundred Thousand People Skilled in Many Intricate Arts.

The next of Great Britain's wars is quite likely to be in Kano. Few people know where Kano is or what sort of people inhabit it, but all reading men will doubtless be familiar with it ere many years elapse. Not many will accept the description of the Hausas that it is "the center of the world," but Kano, without using the language of extravagance, must be ranked among the wonders of Africa. Its high walls inclose a population of 100,000 people, living in houses which, though built of mud, are not by any means to be despised and which line broad streets and roads which would put many London streets to shame. Most of the houses are shaded by trees, and one traveler has described the appearance of the town as being that of "a big beautiful garden."

The great market, says this traveler, who visited Kano a year or two ago, is one of the wonders of the world: "Almost anything can be bought there—sugar, 1s per pound; cotton, cloth, leather, needles, crockery, tinware, dyes, lime, charcoal, meat, slaves, camels, horses, food of every variety, including tomatoes, wheat, tamed gazelles and hyenas, wild cats, birds, anything and everything. The money of the country is still the cowry shells, of which the king sent us 400,000 as a present, but the Maria Theresa dollar is taken, and the great men gladly buy up any quantity of gold and silver coins, for the Hausa is an adept at working in silver and gold and is as proud as he is skillful. Moreover, he smelts his own ore and works up his native iron in wondrous shapes. The city has thirteen gates (which are always closed at sunset), and is some twelve or fourteen miles in circumference. On the whole, it lies four square, but some of the walls are a little irregular."

There is dignity in majesty even in the heart of Africa. It is said of one African monarch that each morning after breakfast he leaves his hut and opens his great umbrella and then declares before all the earth that the sun may from that moment shine. Those who would visit the king of Kano on his throne must take off their shoes and even their stockings and bow their heads to the ground. Three hours an English mission waited at the palace gates, and then—"a low murmur arose, a pathway was suddenly cut and a magnificent warrior pranced up and drew rein at our feet. This was the waziri, the second man in the kingdom. The palace, a splendid specimen of mud architecture, was a mass of people and the courtyards were crammed. While we stood in the judgment hall, which was thronged with well-dressed men squatting on the floor, suddenly all the instruments of music burst forth, our umbrellas were snatched from our hands and we were hurried into the king's splendid audience chamber. At the far end, on a rich red dais, was seated the king, wearing a black rawnl, which covered everything but his eyes. He is said to be about 30 years of age and to be quite white, but he is more probably copper colored."

"THE MOCKING BIRD."

How This Old-Time Popular Song Came to Be Written.

This is how the late Septimus Winner came to compose "Listen to the Mocking Bird." The account is furnished by the composer's son, J. Gibson Winner of Philadelphia.

"It was suggested by listening to a colored man, Dick Milburn, known as 'Whistling Dick,' Mr. Winner said. "Dick was a unique character. He found infinite delight in wandering about the city whistling in imitation of a mocking bird, at the same time strumming an accompaniment upon the guitar.

"My father met him one day, and, struck by his remarkable performance as a warbler, said to him, half in jest:

"'How would you like to have a song for your mocking bird, Dick?'

"The negro glared at father in abject astonishment, and then, with a laugh that echoed through the block, replied:

"'Dat would be mighty nice, massa, an' I would be much obleeged t' yo', massa, ef yo' done gwine to do so!'

"The compass of Dick's voice was hardly an octave, and in order to fit him properly the melody was made very simple. That same evening my father composed the words and music.

"The words which ran higher were to be spoken by the darkey, not sung, except where they came within his range, followed by the whistler's clever imitation of the bird. Dick was a very good-natured fellow, but not endowed with much intellectual capacity. Night after night he came to Mr. Winner's music store to learn the words of the song. Try as he would, father could not teach him the words.

"Eventually, however, Dick mastered one verse. Milburn, nevertheless, had ideas of his own. He had a fine sense of humor, and improvised lines to the music, suggesting ridiculous fancies to attract the laughing crowd. It was not long before his idea of the mocking-bird song became popular and added greatly to Dick's local reputation.

"The song was published in ballad form soon after and quickly took hold on the public. It was sung all over the country, and is just as popular to-day as it was forty-seven years ago.

"Father sold it to Lee & Walker, a Philadelphia firm, for $5, and during the twenty-eight years of its copyright never received anything beyond the price at which it was originally sold. The profits from its sale have exceeded $100,000, perhaps the largest amount ever realized from any musical composition of its class."

Milesian Editor in Kansas.
